While a group of American colonists were adopting the Declaration of Independence announcing their departure from England and King George, a group of twenty-one Spanish colonial soldiers were keeping watch in what was then known as "El Fuerte del Santa Cruz del Cibolo" or "Fort Cibolo" initially established near present-day Sutherland Springs.

El Fuerte del Cibolo was erected to help keep watch and provide protection over the precious livestock in the many ranches near and along the Cibolo creek between Bexar and La Bahia (present-day Goliad).

According to the Texas State Historical Association's Handbook of Texas, El Fuerte del Cibolo existed between 1734-1737 and again from 1771-1782. In 1780, Spanish Texas Governor Domingo Cabello petitioned to have El Fuerte moved from its location near Sutherland Springs to a more strategic location further south. Today, a historical marker near Kosciusko recognizes this fort and its history.

The twenty-one men on duty at El Fuerte del Cibolo on July 4, 1776 are listed on the graphic below:

El Fuerte's exact location near Sutherland Springs has yet to be confirmed. However, clues exist that may help researchers discover yet another gem in Wilson County's rich history.

L. N. Savoy Dies From Fall Sustained While Working On Library Building

L. N. Savoy, 53, died at the Blake hospital in Floresville early Wednesday morning as the result of a fall from a scaffold at the new Wilson County Library building where he was employed as a plasterer. He was working on the outside ceiling of the side entrance to the building at the time. No one knows just how the accident occurred but it is thought he made a mis-step and fell from the scaffold, his head striking the concrete walk. He suffered a fracture of the skull and contusion of the brain and never regained consciousness.

Religious services were held at the Murray Funeral Home Thursday afternoon at 3:30 with burial in Floresville cemetery.

Mr. Savoy was born in Washington county, Texas, January 14, 1893 and lived there for many years. The family moved to Wilson county about 12 years ago and resided on their farm on the San Antonio highway, a few miles northwest of town. Mr. and Mrs. Savoy were hard-working and thrifty people and engaged in the raising of turkeys on a large scale. Their turkey farm created wide interest for they had developed the breed of broad-breasted turkeys which established them as pioneers in the industry here.

Mr. Savoy also followed the trade of a brick mason and plasterer and was a skilled workman in his line.

The entire community mourns the untimely and tragic death of this good citizen and deepest sympathy is extended members of the bereaved family in their great sorrow.

He is survived by his father, Edward Savoy; his widow; one son, Edward Savoy of Beaumont; two sisters, Mrs. J. T. Justice of Floresville and Mrs. Rivers Jennings of Bellville, Texas; one brother, Jim Savoy of Corpus Christi.

In August of 1946, Louis Savoy, a skilled brick mason and plasterer, was working on the County's library (current Archives building) when, according to the news account of the time, he fell from the scaffold, hitting his head on the concrete walk which proved fatal.

Mr. Savoy was a life-long resident of Texas. While his residency in Wilson County only lasted just over a decade until his passing, his presence may have never left.

Just a few weeks ago, while Sandra Smith, the Wilson County Archives librarian, was reading this article, her daughter told her she saw a "figure" cross the hallway near the Archives' restroom. Sandra's daughter was unaware of what she was reading. At the time, Sandra and her daughter were the only ones in the building. Well, they were the only ones that were alive in the building.

Have you experienced such phenomenon elsewhere in Wilson County? Where was it? What was the occasion? Did you tell anyone?
